Partnership for Scientific Inquiry (PSI) Oregon Health & Science University (OHSU)

OHSU is an equal opportunity affirmative action institution.

PSI classes meet at OHSU on Mondays from 4:30-6:30pm during Spring semester. High school students gain first-hand knowledge of research methods and work to develop a research proposal. Classes are designed to teach effective scientific communication and inquiry skills. The course requires regular attendance and a significant time commitment outside of class. Each student will be paired with an OHSU faculty member as a mentor. Students may also do a research project with their mentor over the summer if they are 16 or older by summer. Applications are available on our website and due by Jan. 5, 2014.
